OUTSIDE ACTIVITIES	We had a farewell party for the 3rd years who are finishing Kyudo because they are studying for tests. It was a lot of fun. I have also been to Karaoke with some of my friends a few times and have been having lunch with them sometimes after club. School: From the 10th onwards I am going to be going to all classes for around a week and then from there I will sit down with my homeroom teacher and decide which subjects I will go to. It will probably most subjects with the exception of things such as Japanese government and similar subjects however I will be going to the vast majority of them. I have also made a lot of friends in my new class and they are all very nice. Home: My life with the Nakamuras is very good. They are very nice. When I am at home I am with them in the family room and I often play FIFA on the playstation with my host brother and I have been teaching my host father how to play chess. He is very good at shogi and as a result he is also very good at chess so it has become quite challenging. Because I live quite far away from my school it results in me leaving at around 6:40am and arriving home at around 8:20pm every night so I don't get all that much time with my host family, but it's still really fun when I'm with them.

Language study	Especially recently I have defiantly noticed that my Japanese has gotten better. I am currently studying to do the JLPT test in early July so I am busy studying for that. It's getting quite tricky as I am starting to learn some much more formal Japanese but I'm hanging in there.
Requests	Yeah, could I please have Jeff's email address. I think I received it however I think I have left it at my previous host family's house (which I am returning to as they are my last host family as well)
